Benefits of Choosing an Academic Health Center

By Judy Tung,
 M.D., F.A.C.P

Special to INBrooklyn

Why choose an academic medical center? Academic medical centers are partnerships between hospitals, medical colleges, research institutions and community groups to deliver the best in health care.

Most academic medical centers are founded on a tripartite mission: to deliver excellence in clinical care, to educate the next generation of physicians and to advance biomedical research. Together, these three missions provide for patients what is most cutting-edge and comprehensive in the field of medicine.

Excellence in clinical care starts with qualified and committed providers. Doctors in academic medical centers are board-certified in their specialties. While board certification is only one yardstick by which competency is measured, it is a nationally accepted qualification.

Board certification is obtained by passing national exams at set intervals and by providing "the board" evidence of clinical experience and participation in ongoing professional development.

Commitment to the craft of medicine is a feature of the doctors who serve as faculty for the medical college. From instructor to professor, academic faculty members teach and train medical students, residents, fellows and a variety of other learners. They pledge to the betterment of their students as well as to the continuous improvement of their own art.

Excellence in medical care also requires access to new knowledge. Scientific research generates new understanding of health conditions, including better methods to prevent, detect and treat disease. Research programs offer patients access to specialists, subspecialists and clinical trials, which can provide medications not yet available in standard settings.

Epidemiologic data and advanced information systems allow providers an enhanced ability to track and manage disease conditions. Research on health services and health systems allows academic leaders the opportunity to engineer hospitals and outpatient practices to more optimally meet the needs of patients.

The complexity of health care demands a system that supports it, a system that promotes communication, coordination and collaboration. It requires a system that values the community in which it resides. These are the tenets by which academic medical centers function. Academic centers have an abundance of resources: nurses, technicians, care managers, social workers, pharmacists and other members of the care team that are not easily found in private offices or smaller hospital settings.

For all of these reasons, most New Yorkers will travel even great distances to reap the benefits of an academic medical center for their primary and specialty health care. Thankfully, those living in Brooklyn no longer have to travel so far.

In June 2013, New York Presbyterian Hospital and Weill Cornell Medicine underwent a full asset merger with the former New York Downtown Hospital to create the New York Presbyterian-Lower Manhattan Hospital.

Residents of all communities in the area can take advantage of the world-class physicians practicing at 156 William St. and 40 Worth St. Weill Cornell Medicine providers are now in the neighborhood at a multispecialty modern facility; come and take advantage of this transformation.

Dr. Judy Tung is chair of the Department of Medicine at Weill Cornell Medicine/New York Presbyterian-Lower Manhattan Hospital and practices general internal medicine/primary care at 156 Williams St., seventh floor. Her practice can be reached at 646-962-5665.

Gowanus Continues to Attract Residential, Commercial Investors

By Mark Spinelli,
Vice President,
Ariel Property Advisors
Brooklyn's commercial real estate market experienced another record-setting year in 2015, with $9.96 billion in overall dollar volume and 1,980 properties sold in 1,409 transactions, as recently announced by Ariel Property Advisors' "Brooklyn 2015 Year-End Sales Report."

While the broader region composed of Park Slope and Downtown Brooklyn accounted for an impressive $2.7 billion worth of Brooklyn commercial real estate sales, Gowanus particularly stood out in 2015 for several reasons.

In recent years, accelerating interest from developers and investors in Gowanus has produced a renaissance of commercial and residential development.

In 2015, Gowanus saw increases across many commercial real estate metrics. Most notably, the neighborhood's investment property sales soared by nearly 47 percent to hit $180.875 million in total dollar volume, topping the $123 million seen in 2014.

Gowanus had a 17 percent uptick in its pricing per buildable square foot for development sites, seeing $262 versus $223 in 2014. Multifamily properties saw solid pricing gains, rising to $561 price per square foot, which is 15 percent higher than 2014 pricing of $489.

The interest in Gowanus is underscored by the sale of 92 Third St. (also known as 68-80 Third St.) to Samson Management. The recently rehabilitated and repurposed industrial building sold for $73 million from PWR, a partnership between LIVWRK and FirstMark Capital.

Initially, PWR bought the 90,000-square-foot property for $20.3 million in early 2014, and this sale showed the building's appreciation spike by 259.6 percent. The majority of the property hosts a mobile marketing company, Genius Media, and co-working space provider Cowork.rs.

The jumps within area data underscores that Gowanus is becoming poised as one of Brooklyn's most exciting areas for living, shopping, arts and culture and its former reputation as a neighborhood known for toxic waste and vacant industrial space will soon be a distant memory.

Though the neighborhood's transformation from a gritty industrial area to a development hotbed can be traced back to various initiatives and economic components, the single greatest influence on the revitalization of Gowanus is the infamous 1.8-mile canal that bears its name.

Designated a Superfund site by the Environmental Protection Agency in 2010, the cleanup of the Gowanus Canal began in 2015 and will be completed in various phases between 2018 and 2022 at a cost of more than $500 million, to be shared by the City of New York as well as a multitude of businesses and organizations ranging from Consolidated Edison to the U.S. Navy.

The Lightstone Group was attracted to the potential of this neighborhood and initiated a 700-unit residential project at 363 and 365 Bond St. — a sign of what's to come following the canal's cleanup. 365 Bond St. is opening this year and is composed of 429 units with market-rate one-bedroom apartments renting for more than $3,000 per month. The building will feature luxury amenities such as outdoor space, bike storage and gym facilities aimed at attracting young professionals.

Late last year, 363 Bond St. was sold to Atlantic Realty Development for the large sum of $75 million. The building is slated to become a 12-story development with 268 rental units.

Though these buildings are the most visible residential developments, partly due to the somewhat restrictive zoning in the area, they are far from the only projects in the neighborhood. The Hudson Companies, in conjunction with the City of New York, are planning a 774-unit mixed-use project on Smith Street and Fifth Street dubbed "Gowanus Green," slated to open in 2017.

In addition to being the home of new and exciting residential developments, Gowanus has seen an influx of new businesses entering the neighborhood. Area staples such as the famed Dinosaur BBQ, Brooklyn Boulders and Whole Foods have been joined by boutique spas, yoga studios, craft cocktail bars, small batch breweries and Korean BBQ restaurants.

On Third Avenue, LIVWRK has repurposed an industrial building into office space built to suit tech companies such as the Netherlands-based advertising analytics firm BGenius, among others. Additionally, Kushner Companies has partnered with LIVWRK on a 150,000-square-foot retail site directly across from the Whole Foods on Third Avenue, paying between $70 and $80 million for the site.

The city has its eye on boosting activity in Gowanus and its surrounding areas. Just last month, Mayor Bill de Blasio announced his proposal of a Brooklyn-Queens Connector (BQX), streetcar line, which would also add two new bridges across the Gowanus Canal and Newtown Creek. The bridges would provide pedestrian walkways and bike lanes. City officials say their cost has been included into the project's $2.5 billion cost. The BQX will run from Sunset Park to Astoria and will positively impact several large projects in the works along the waterfront when it's projected to be completed in 2024.

Though the neighborhood changes are exciting for developers, entrepreneurs and businesses, the local community has expressed some reservations regarding the future of Gowanus. While a 2008 rezoning set the stage for neighborhood development, the global financial crisis had stalled projects until the last several years. Bridging Gowanus, a community group dedicated to creating a robust neighborhood inclusive of local residents and community boards, has been the voice of these concerns while offering viable solutions and compromises. With comprehensive suggestions for development, manufacturing, businesses and affordable housing, the community aims to facilitate sustainable improvement for new and longtime residents of the area.

In a recent Wall Street Journal article, Mitchell Hochberg, chair of the Lightstone Group, drew a comparison between Gowanus and the famed Canal Saint-Martin neighborhood in Paris, saying, "we saw that this had the ability to mature into that."

We share Mr. Hochberg's optimism and look forward to a stronger and more dynamic Gowanus as it continues to evolve.

Horoscope

THE LUCKIEST SIGNS THIS WEEK:
VIRGO, LIBRA AND SCORPIO.

Week of March 15-21, 2016

ARIES

There are lots of comings and goings this week. You get stuck in traffic or you have trouble finding the place you're looking for. A map or a GPS will be useful.

TAURUS

You work some extra hours for which you are generously rewarded. A short training session helps you bring to life one of your major professional dreams.

GEMINI

You are under a bit of pressure to make a choice, and you won't have time to weigh the pros and cons. The best path is to follow your intuition.

CANCER

Going back to school could be the solution to your professional problems. Looking at it from the long-term perspective will help you confront all the effort that such a project requires.

LEO

Friends invite you to go on some really great outings with them. It's important to take advantage of this opportunity if you've been staying at home recently.

VIRGO

Time is in short supply. You're responsible for all the emergencies that arise, either at work or elsewhere. It isn't always easy to balance work with a busy family life.

LIBRA

You may decide to take a trip on the spur of the moment. Or maybe it will be your employer who sends you to the other side of the country to please a client.

SCORPIO

You have to cope with a lot of emotions, but there is no other choice than to stay calm so you can manage the situation. You find the solution to a money problem.

SAGITTARIUS

You organize an event that brings together several people, either at work or for some type of social activity. For some reason or another, people seem nervous around you.

CAPRICORN

Anxiety could affect your health. Don't let yourself be overwhelmed by these feelings, which are not typical for you. Therapy or some kind of escape would be beneficial.

AQUARIUS

You take on a big challenge that lets you feel proud of yourself. Some people may try to discourage you, but with perseverance, you can accomplish miracles.

PISCES

If you're planning to move soon, you start making some preparations for the big day. A family member is rather demanding, and he or she may try to take advantage of your generosity.

Sudoku

How To PLAY:

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the numbers 1 through 9 only once.

Each 3x3 box is outlined with a darker line. You already have a few numbers to get you started.

Remember: You must not repeat the numbers 1 through 9 in the same line, column, or 3x3 box.
